

International Public Notice: About Medicare and Medicaid

By Anna Von Reitz

The Social Security Administration started out as an old age pension and medical insurance program for Federal Employees and Dependents under Franklin Delano Roosevelt's Administration.

This self-help pension program was to be paid for by the workers and their employers, fifty-fifty.

Upon reaching retirement age, arbitrarily set at 65, the program would begin paying for a monthly stipend and basic medical care. The tax supporting this, FICA, was extracted from every paycheck with an Employee portion and an Employer portion duly noted.

What the General Public wasn't told is that the Social Security Act was vaguely worded, so that while it appeared to mean "dependents of Federal employees" in the traditional sense of spouses and children, who might be eligible for some consideration under the program, the word "dependent" could also indicate anyone who was subject to a public trust or political asylum.

It was this second, undisclosed meaning of "dependent" that FDR employed in making his odd demand that "everyone" sign up for Social Security and telling everyone including the General Public that they had to sign up and receive a Social Security Number in order to have a job.

As usual, FDR did nothing to disclose that the "everyone" he was talking to was supposed to be the Municipal citizens of the United States who were staffing the Federal Civil Service. He also failed to disclose that the only people who needed to enroll in Social Security "in order to have a job" --- were those seeking Federal Employment or Federal Asylum.

It was this second group of people seeking Federal Asylum, that we were all conveniently supposed to belong to.

This deceptive wordsmithing and use of double meanings for common words led to millions of Americans believing that this was a new "government law" and that they were required to enroll in Social Security, which they did by the millions in response to this deliberately induced misunderstanding.

The actual wording of the first Social Security Act made it quite clear that this new program was only intended for Federal Employees and their Dependents, that it would be an old age pension and benefit package for Civil Servants, and that the money collected would go into a special Social Security trust fund set aside from the General Fund, so that Congress couldn't spend it for anything else.

Suddenly, millions of people were mistakenly paying into this program for Federal workers and their pensions were being heavily subsidized by all these Americans and by the employers of all these Americans.

Still, all would have probably gone well-enough, if the Vermin had simply kept their word, but of course, being Vermin, they didn't.

Soon, the U.S. Congress had tinkered with and "redefined" everything without the consent of the program participants, steadily increasing the amount of the FICA tax levied as a payroll tax on both the Employees and their Employers, redefining the "pensions" as "distributed payments" and finally, merely "benefits".

The program prospered and the tremendous amount of money collected under this scheme created a huge potential Slush Fund for the Congress, which, predictably, started tapping and finally just dissolved the Social Security Trust Fund and rolled it over into the General Fund for direct hand-to-mouth spending.

It comes as a great shock to many people even today to learn that there is no special Social Security Trust Fund anymore, and that their pension and benefits under that program are not secured. It also comes as a shock that more than 7% of their lifetime gross earnings and an equal amount extracted from their Employers, adds up to a tremendous amount of money that has simply been purloined by the British Territorial U.S. Congress to be spent however Congress wants to spend it.

There is no Golden Parachute and no safety net for Social Security as a result.

This is bad enough, but the story gets worse. Immoral profit-seeking has led to the program being pillaged and plundered by fraud artists, especially impacting Medicare and Medicaid.

Medicare has traditionally been a program paid for by the presumed Federal Employees or Federal Dependents and their Employers, while Medicaid has been a program for the destitute and indigent and anyone else who fell through the cracks, whether or not they ever paid a penny into Social Security or not.

Like everything else subject to Congressional meddling, Medicaid has become a supplement to Medicare, and another new program, SSI is now used to provide payments and benefits to a wide variety of uninsured, indigent, unemployed or unemployable persons who enrolled in Social Security but never "vested" in the program by contributing to it during forty (40) three-month "quarters" --- a period of ten (10) years.

These people who didn't work long enough to qualify for benefits, nonetheless receive benefits, and often receive more than those who worked and contributed to the program for forty years --- which is a boiling sore spot with the American Public, which is outraged to realize that they have been defrauded and deliberately misinformed and misrepresented as Federal Asylum Seekers, and then are expected to take a back seat for every poor-mouthing special interest group on the planet.

Most recently, Social Security was plundered to pay for housing and food stamps and support payments to illegal aliens--- a situation and misappropriation for which we hold every member of the Biden Administration and the entire British Territorial U.S. Congress accountable for.

Efforts are ongoing to recoup credit that Americans have paid into the Social Security Administration by mistake, as a result of the deceptive language and misinformation they were given.

All of these abuses have taken place while the same Bad Actors have been operating under color of law, and seeming to have government authority to enforce these "taxes", when in fact the Federal Subcontractors involved were engaged in their own administrative and personnel issues--- and deliberately misaddressing these to the American Public and self-interestedly entrapping members of the American Public in their crooked and ill-defined pension system.

Here's a recent example of how our Federal Subcontractors have abused their Employers and misused their own positions of trust for political ends:

Americans who worked hard all their lives and who counted on "Social Security" for all or part of their retirement plan, have been robbed blind and now must face the likelihood that there will be some kind of collapse that benefits the cronies and the criminals while leaving these innocent people destitute in their old age.
