

Your "Christian" Blood Oath

By Anna Von Reitz

Many years ago, like most of you who consider yourselves Christians, I believed that, obviously -- or so it appeared, this religion advocated "The Way" or "Road Map" that Yeshuah (in English, Joshua) taught in the New Testament, and that Christianity was a religion all about life and love and compassion and fellowship, suffering, overcoming, and faith in God.

I suppose my innocent belief and the love for Yeshuah that inspired me, was rooted in the same tradition as the popular Passion Play musical, "Godspell" --which I still love for the music and sentiment, but now view with a far more mature and jaundiced perspective.

To make this an example, doesn't it give you pause to look at the name, "Godspell" --- as in "God's spell" as in a spell of witchcraft? Spell-binding? Why call it that, if that's not what it is?

Remember that the Liars are required to declare the Truth of what they are doing.

In later years, I came to know that all "Christians" take a "Blood Oath" though I never recognized it as such when I was a young woman.

The Pastors of the Evangelical Lutheran Church that I attended faithfully and took seriously as a teenager and young adult certainly never breathed a word of any such thing, but having studied Law and History and Religion for five decades, I know what they didn't tell me.

The Blood Oath is the Apostle's Creed, and the blood is the Communion wine. Simple as that.

You've been asking me about my "Blood Oath", but what you need to worry about is your own.

In reviewing the Catholic Doctrine of Transubstantiation, which teaches that the Communion wine mysteriously becomes actual blood in the cup, and the implications of cannibalism this carries with it, I became truly alarmed.

And I started investigating, just as I did when I went to the IRS Office for answers and was told that the workers couldn't affirm the answers they'd given me.

One of the other things that initially raised my eyebrows and sent my Shinola Sensor off-scale was the fact that The Holy Bible is a copyrighted work of the Roman Catholic Church.

This implies that they literally wrote it as a unique work of art and they claim authorship, as their work, and not a compendium of ancient manuscripts brought together and compiled and "approved" as genuine by Catholic scholars and theologians.

No, they claim authorship, which is quite a different matter.

And that was a shock.

I had to think -- and you should, too -- I am committing my life and soul and money and time to a novel written by the Roman Catholic Church?

A novel which is periodically revisited every fifty years and changed -- just enough -- to earn a new copyright? Really?

And yet, further investigation yields that this is exactly true, and timed out that way, too. Every fifty years like clockwork, a new version is released and a new copyright is obtained.

All the various other renditions and translations of The Bible from the King's James Version to the NIV and even the Jehovah Witnesses' rendition, all do the same thing.

They all claim to be copyrighted works of art.

Works of art. Like a play. Like Georgette Heyer. Like David Copperfield or Moby Dick.

Let that sink in.

Then, I started thinking--- his name was Yeshuah and that translates directly as Joshua in English, so why is everyone calling him "Jesus"?

That doesn't even make sense.

Saint Jerome knew this as well as I do.

So why change his name? Just for the sake of obfuscation? To hide the fact that he was Jewish?

Or to make him into someone else?

The more I thought about this and delved into it, the tighter the little knot of wrinkles at the bridge of my nose got.

And then, there's the rest of the name they attached to him posthumously, "Christ".

Christ means "the Anointed One" -- and it is an office of priesthood -- the priesthood of Baal.

Okay, take a deep breath and go back and read the last several books of the Gospels. What do you see now that you didn't see before?

According to the narrative, when the Jews rejected him, Yeshuah turned to the Gentiles and Samaritans instead, and accepted being anointed as a priest of Baal by Mary Magdalene.

So, Jesus Christ isn't Yeshuah.

It's another Substitution Scheme.

And the religion you have been depending on for your moral guidance and ethical inspiration and eternal salvation is just another shell game.

Like Gollum, the purveyors of Christianity have served an unintended purpose, and have preserved and popularized the teachings of Yeshuah (many of which were borrowed from earlier teachers and wisdom traditions) and that has had an amazing and transformative effect on our lives -- for the better.

Yet, the downsides have to be admitted, too --- fear, coercion, superstition, religious prejudice and elitism, not to mention innumerable acts of cruelty, murder, and theft and fraud which have been excused in the name of different religious beliefs.

And then, the final straw was discovering that they were using baptism as an excuse to claim an ownership interest in the Nephesh, the part of a living soul that gives us animal energy and the ability to perform labor.

They have been buying, selling, trading, and monetizing the value of this part of our soul and used baptismal certificates to do it -- and have been creating labor bonds to harvest this venal undisclosed claim upon the value of our labor.

They've claimed that your innocent acceptance of "Christian" baptism gives them an ownership interest in the Nephesh part of your soul, and a private contract claim on the value of your labor --- and never a whisper to you about this.

This is the private "contract" that the Internal Revenue Service / IRS is enforcing.

To which I said, eff them forever, the dirty, rotten, lying, sneak-thief bastards. Enslaving people and condemning them to lifelong peonage, behind the face of a "purifying sacrament"!

I'll purify them, and when I am done, they will be lucky to have any skin left.

I meant it, too, from the bottom of my soul.

The Ruach, God's Breath within me, affirmed my complete, utter, unrelenting disgust with them and what they have done "in the name of God".

So I wrote the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Black River Falls, Wisconsin, a nice succinct letter, told them what they were engaged in, and instructed them in no uncertain terms to strike my name off their baptismal enrollment register -- for lack of disclosure.

And damn you, very much.

I don't consider myself a "Christian", and it has nothing to do with my love for Joshua or his teachings, which remains.

It has to do with what the word "Christian" really means and the practices these Liars have employed to mislead, rob, and abuse generations of innocent people who relied on them for truth, comfort, protection, and solace.

I'll go toe to toe with the phony "Pope" Francis or the Eastern Patriarch or the Archbishop of Canterbury any day they want to face me --- but they won't want to face me.

In their tradition, they will be staring into the face of the Primal Creator, Durga, the Great Mother, come now to reap their souls for their iniquity -- and take away all their unjust enrichment, too.

So don't expect any chummy ecumenical councils from me. Expect me to drive them like so many foxes before the hounds.

My advice to you, good Christians all -- stop calling yourselves "Christians" when that doesn't mean what you think it means, stop relying on these evil, selfish, venal men for anything but a nose-bleed.

They don't know God. They don't know Joshua or his teachings in their hearts. Most of them don't even know what their own churches have been doing.

Stop taking Blood Oaths substituted for any kind of true Communion and submitting to their filthy excuse for a Baptism.

Look within yourselves for the Truth and the Way and the Life, and make your own quiet Communion with your Lord whenever you drink wine or eat bread.

Bless it in his true name--Joshua, and pray in his true name, too. Then step back and see what miracles come to you.

Proof is in the pudding, dear hearts.

Just as it was in the days of Elijah and Ezekial, you shall see what you shall see.

Anna Maria

See this article and over 4500 others on Anna's website here: www.annavonreitz.com

To support this work look for the Donate button on this website.