I received this note from Anna this afternoon.

"An emergency meeting of senior editors was held last night and the decision was made to publish the text in its entirety. There will be a hard copy available for purchase, but the fear of the information being suppressed, its importance to the entire world, and other considerations outweighed the current need to raise money.

So. As always, I do the work, everyone consumes for free, and all we get back is the 1/10th of those "lepers" who return to give thanks voluntarily.

If He asked for no more, neither can I, but it is hard, Paul. Very hard on all of us.

These books should all be million sellers at least and many millions of copies have already been distributed. They are having their impact on people's lives and on their thinking and feeling and insight into the world, but not on our bottom line. I know."
