

International Public Notice: The Condition of India

By Anna Von Reitz

People have asked us to explain the condition of India, and its history run as a film script in tandem with our own. This question arises in part as we have used the term, "American Raj", to explain what has gone on here, and also as a result of confusion in India itself, which continues to suffer the abuses of the British Raj long after that plague was purportedly removed by the non-violent resistance India posed under the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi.

Remember that the Mahatma had been thoroughly trained as a young man as a British Barrister and knew all the ins and outs of the various jurisdictions of the law. They couldn't bamboozle him, but his successors, the people who followed after him as leaders in India, did not have the benefit of his education. They fell back under the influence and control of the Raj ---merely operated in a different jurisdiction of the law.

Let us begin with a little-known fact in the Western World: not so long ago, India was one of the richest countries, if not the richest country, on the planet.

Let that sink in.

Then let that piece of new information correlate with all the horrible pictures of mass graves, people looking like walking skeletons, news of famine killing thousands upon thousands.... the grinding poverty and mean streets of Delhi and Calcutta, Mother Teresa's nuns carrying the destitute to make-shift hospitals, little children working in cesspits, picking through garbage, and mining handfuls of poisonous ore, one tiny handful at a time.

What happened?

Britain, Rome, and the Netherlands happened.

We have explained how Benjamin D'Israeli seduced the aging Queen Victoria into his corporate enfranchisement scheme, which redefined the working people of Britain as corporate franchises and trafficked them from their natural jurisdiction on the land and soil into the jurisdiction of the sea, where their assets could be "salvaged" and used as collateral backing the Queen's Government ---- which in turn could then afford to invade India.

Thus the British Working Class was defrauded and enslaved, in order to finance the enslavement of the Indian Subcontinent.

Queen Victoria would become the Empress of India and the British Territorial "Raj" --- international mercenaries run by the Templars, would be set free to rampage and pillage and plunder the vast wealth of India.

They came quietly under color of law, and insinuated themselves in bureaucratic positions in many different businesses --- attorneys, actors, railroad magnates, mining company executives, agricultural consultants --- the actual invasion started in the 1830's, and by the 1860's, it was relatively easy for these pre-placed business interests to support the change and consolidation of a substitute government against the interests of the traditional kingdoms and principalities of the Maharajahs.

This didn't happen without fights, and plenty of them, with horrific costs on both sides, but it did happen --- and as it did, vast quantities of gold, silver, platinum, jewels, and minerals, not to mention artifacts and art --- were stripped out of India by the British Territorials, otherwise known as the British Raj, and otherwise by the British Crown Forces (Templar Mercenaries) and shipped to Europe.

Bank records show that Queen Victoria split up the loot among the European Kingdoms whose thrones were occupied by her children and grandchildren. The Bank of England received back 10 Billion Metric Tons of gold from Czar Nicholas II, credited to Russia, and 8 Billion Metric Tons of gold, also from Czar Nicholas II, credited to the Kingdom of Prussia, shortly before the so-called Russian Revolution took hold.

How much of this gold was legitimately gold that belonged to Russia and Prussia, versus how much was stolen from India, is not known.

We can't be sure until the gold itself is examined and assayed to reveal its origins and trading receipts are compared.

But where, you say, could the Bank of England possibly be hiding this much gold? Buried in pits, or, in some cases, stacked up and covered over with soil and turf. It shows up using modern tomography and LIDAR spectrum analysis, which the oil companies developed and began to use to prospect for new oil reservoirs.

They found a lot more than oil.

Of course, they kept the news to themselves, until it became obvious that their mineral prospecting involved more than petroleum basins.

When Lord James Brown informed the Parliament that the gold supply records were all wrong and patently impossible to believe, Lord Sassoon blustered something to the effect that "Everyone knows that only 1500 Tonnes of gold have ever been extracted from the Earth....." but that proved to be an insufficient answer.

The Libor Scandal erupted and news of widespread commodity rigging of all kinds began to leak out; most people were confused, just as they are confused now.

The mainstream media doesn't report that the Vatican, the Federal Reserve, and Black Rock are all bankrupt, and other news that would provide perspective.

The people of India are also confused, wondering how "their" government has continued to be so oppressive, why is it that they can barely tell the difference between the old Raj and the government they have now?

They are told that all the misery is because their country is overpopulated, not because it was looted.

They are told that the glorious revolution led by Mahatma Gandhi was successful, even though it ultimately wasn't.

Self-governance lasted a few short years before it was undermined again -- and by the same foreign interests that supported the Raj.

Like the other members of the Commonwealth System, India was informed that the Commonwealth had ended, oh, hooray, and then, nothing changed. Just as in Canada. Just as in New Zealand, South Africa, Australia....

The old Colonialist system of things was, purportedly, according to the newspapers, a thing of the past. Counties that had been imposed on by the British Empire were suddenly free at last. Or were they?

After the celebrated announcement ending the Commonwealth, the countries impacted were supposed to spontaneously create their own governments and run their own affairs, but nobody told the people that. Certainly, the British didn't lift a finger or say a word.

They simply chugged along, business as usual.

After seven years, none of the (formerly) captive populations had moved to get organized and declare a new government, so the Brits shrugged and declared new British protectorates, continued their illegal occupation, and if anything, they became more reckless, more corrupt, and more oppressive than before.

They consider all the rest of us too stupid to live.

They poke and prod us, testing the limits of what they can get away with.

They keep everyone confused and knocking into each other, like actors in a Monty Python skit.

So, India --- along with all the other members of the former Commonwealth --- was "re-subscribed" as if your choice of government was subject to automatic renewal.

British Subject status was "presumed" and the obligations of British Citizenship were "conferred"; private land parcels were latched onto and transferred into the British Title System, property taxes were assessed, the whole swarm of locusts reappeared wearing nice business suits instead of uniforms.

This is, of course, nothing but organized crime and racketeering, especially as it is being promoted and implemented by foreign commercial corporations and foreign municipal corporations.

Because these foreign municipal corporations have operated under Roman Civil Law, they have had no obligation to disclose their operations. The old Roman Maxim, "Let him who will be deceived, be deceived." was fully applicable and was applied with gusto, and not a shred of compassion.

Until we woke up and called them on it, they were free to rape, plunder, pillage, presume, and oppress at will; now that we have unraveled their deceit, the Romans are obeying their own law and hurriedly collapsing their sideshow. The British, not so much.

The British have tried to brazen it out to the bitter end, complete with threats and obfuscations, attempts to discredit us, criminal charges against the phony Roman ESTATES established in our names, every kind of excuse, prevarication, and tactic has been tried, up to and including the deadly pandemic which was supposed to be a "memorial" to Prince Philip.

Those of us who remember things, remember when Prince Philip said that after he died, he wished to come back as a "loathsome virus" and do "his bit" to solve the population problem.

We also remember the weird pageants staged at the London Olympics, where nurses brandishing hypodermic needles and pushing gurneys paraded around the grounds, and little black demons raced over the beds and jumped up and down on the patients.

This is all part of British elitism, and what we will call the British insanity, that leads them to believe that they have a right to be contemptuous of the rest of humanity, to deny others' property rights, and even the right of other people to live.

The British Government has gone way too far this time, and so has the Holy Roman Empire. They have conspired together to ruin the Earth and directed their minions to pollute our planet with radioactive waste packed into artillery shells, with underwater demolition of gas pipelines, and man-made Earthquakes using Scalar Weapons developed in this country. They have dumped industrial wastes into our drinking water, and dumped more industrial waste products on our farm fields and woodlands.

We note that the people of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, have suffered the outrages of their government(s) along with the rest of us.

We note that the rank and file members of the Roman Catholic Church have been kept ignorant about the secular side of the Church's operations, and have no concept of the evils that have been perpetuated in their names, any more than average Americans can conceive the condition that their government was reduced to by these colluding con artists.

India is due to receive back its material riches; it never lost its spiritual and intellectual riches, and now understanding what was done to their country, we have no doubt that India will rapidly recover.

England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales will be free again, released from the horrific tax burdens and coercive demands of the gluttonous and criminal empire that took root on their shores in the early 1700s.

America will stand as America again, no longer being confused with and mistaken for any form of "the US" corporatocracy.

The British hegemony ends on October first this year. Let's hope that these "gentlemen" are further persuaded to go quietly, without any additional death and disaster.

This explains -- as best as we are able to explain insanity -- what has happened to India and to our country and to the rest of the world.
