

International Public Notice: Destroying Corporations

By Anna Von Reitz

"Debanking" is being touted as the newest way for the government corporations to discipline unwary and rebellious franchises.

Apparently, even the Big Tech Corporations don't know that they surrendered their ownership interest in their own businesses when they registered as District of Columbia, Inc. or subsidiary British Territorial State of State Corporations.

Apparently, they don't know that the debits in their bank accounts don't stand for money, that they are all bankrupt by definition, and that even if the courts and parent corporations steal every single Federal Reserve Note in sight, they can't be accused of theft, because -- technically, none of these "representations of value" have any value at all. Federal Reserve Notes are not negotiable instruments.

So, you see, those doing the "debanking" have no liability no matter how much debt-credit they steal, and the crooked Maritime Commercial Banks cannot be held accountable nor can they be forced to provide any replacement public banking service, because they are all conceived as private banks that are members of a little private bank cartel club.

The best thing we can do with them is to withdraw the Federal Reserve Notes as proof of their debt and their crime, and boycott them while providing ourselves with our own banks and our own banking services and our own currencies as well.

All the "debanking" does or proves, is how coercive, controlling, and self-interested these predatory banking institutions are. They need to go --- root, stem, and leaf. Right out the door and down the storm drain, together with the criminals who have promoted this insanity.

By accident, they may be preventing some corporations from participating in acts even more criminal than the acts the banks depend on themselves, but otherwise, it's purely by accident if any good comes from it, and otherwise, "debanking" is arbitrary punishment of corporations that don't fall in line with the parent company's policies.

Some people have mistakenly seen "debanking" as a tool to get rid of or greatly marginalize corporations which have become too crooked and too powerful. If it were used for that purpose, it would be a halcyon step toward accountability in the corporate world, but it's not.

The corporations most likely to be debanked are the competitors the Bad Guys want to squelch, those corporations that have moral directors, those corporations that want to do some good in the world, or that own patents or property that the Vermin want to force them to sell.

The criminals running the Maritime Commercial Banks have simply reached a new and more self-evident "low". They obviously think that they are the only game in town and can do whatever they want to do without regard for any property interests belonging to anyone else, whatsoever.

They have no gratitude for their own charters and licenses. They think that nobody can or will get organized to take them down.

But we will; indeed, we have to, because the Roman Catholic Pope who is supposed to be liquidating corporations engaged in unlawful activity, isn't doing the job and hasn't done the job for a long time.

In fact, there's not even a Pope anymore. No agreed upon enforcement at all.

For those who need to know, all the forms of corporations that we are now too familiar with, have been created by the Roman Curia, and as creators, they are responsible for their creations under Roman Civil Law.

The national governments agreed to the proliferation of corporations which began accelerating in the 1850's with the understanding that the Roman Curia's creations would be subject to liquidation under Ecclesiastical Law and that the Popes would be the executive officers responsible for liquidating Bad Corporations.

As of 2011, the Office of the Roman Pontiff has been dissolved, and except for the Curia itself, there is no liable authority to be held accountable.

Benedict XVI split the offices and responsibilities of the Pope. He liquidated the Office of the Roman Pontiff and the underlying Romanus Pontifex and Urban Trusts, leaving the clean up and wagon-circling to his loyal Jesuit soldier, Jorge Bergolio.

Benedict XVI kept the sacred "Ministerial Office" for himself, and died without passing it to Pope Frances or anyone else. No provision for a succession was made. Benedict XVI was literally the last Pope to hold the sacred ministerial office.

We can observe this directly. And we can see the scuttling that went on, with the Church of Rome transferring huge amounts of money to the Eastern Orthodox branch of the Church still in Constantinople, and the quid pro quo granting Pope Frances a cover as "Patriarch of the West".

Just as the Church bifurcated into East and West in response to the fall of Rome, it is once again, bifurcating to Turkey, falling back, and entrenching --- right before our eyes. The Trojan-Phrygian roots of both the Roman Church and Rome itself could not be clearer.

The Curia, for its part, refuses to undertake the role it is heir to, and is in gross default for failure to liquidate corporations that it technically has created --- both as commercial corporations and as municipal corporations --- that are operating unlawfully and causing harm to living people.

They could, for example, liquidate Pfizer, Incorporated, without breaking wind, but since the great Covid-19 debacle, Pfizer has been very profitable and profit is what defines the Curia's standard of "good". The ancient Trojan-Phrygian Death Cult they represent worships Mammon and Mammon is happy as long as profit rolls in.

Lots of profit.

They don't care how the profit is made, how many lives are lost, or how much property is destroyed, so long as it turns a profit. The more profit the better. They will get up on their fettered feet and dance around and chatter like magpies and do a queer rendition of Hasidic Jews in ecstasy, so long as there is a fat profit.

Yes, the world we live in is far stranger than most of us can imagine, but it is what it is.

The corporate realm has become a runaway train, because nobody is at the helm--- at least, nobody responsible and sane.

Think about an actual runaway train -- a million metric tons on steel rails, hurtling along under speed. Imagine the last brakes and restraints being sheared off the tracks, like so many clothespins. Everyone on the train jumps off while they can, risking life and limb to tuck and roll ---- until it is just a runaway train, empty, nobody at the wheel, hurtling on and on, until it runs out of fuel or crashes headlong.

Pope Frances jumped off the train two years ago.

That's the world we are living in now, and the men at fault for this, couldn't care less, so long as they make a profit. From their perspective, it's six of one, half a dozen of another. They don't care if they are in bed with Hitler and Bonaparte or Churchill and Stalin; they win, either way and every way, because they fund both sides and stand to profit from the preservation of infrastructure or the destruction of infrastructure. Either way, it makes no difference to them.

Sometimes they even prefer destruction, because it gives them more control, and an opportunity to update things, start over.

Remember: order comes out of chaos, so they are happy to create chaos, just as they are happy to be the ones imposing order afterward.

This is just a restatement of the Hegelian Dialectic. Cause the problem and then profit from solving the problem.

Just like Trump is doing. Cause the problem: Project Warp Speed.

Solve the problem: Make America Healthy Again.

We could have done without either one. We could have had peace and plenty instead. We could have had uninterrupted health and progress. We could have enjoyed our lives and done something fun --- but these criminals had to pull their stunts.

Think of the cretins letting mayhem reign all summer long in 2020, and then turning off their ginned-up riots like a dried up water tap, just in time to promote the "crack down" on the January 6th Protestors, who didn't murder anyone or cause any substantial damage at all.

Senator John Kennedy called these crooked Perpetrators "goofy people", with an "unwarranted sense of moral and intellectual superiority".

They are not moral, not intellectual and not superior. They are simply bags of wind without a conscience, walking appetites whose limited brain power is devoted to crime and self-advantage, and by no means are they superior to the simplest songbird perched on a twig.

Their greatest claim to fame rests on being alive, a gift that they do not deserve, based on their own actions.

This is the moment when we witness things like The Black Plague. Let's face it, the biological warfare these cretins have already released isn't that much different, just higher tech. This is when they poison the wells --- or the skies.

They are not going to take responsibility and destroy any of their corporations for Bad Behavior; morality long ago became "relative" for them. There's no good, no bad, they say. There's just profit and loss.

They have no wives or children to worry about, no connection to biological life beyond their own abused and fragile frames. This is how they come to value institutions and corporations, and forget the value of living men --- because of their own deadness, alienation, and isolation.

How dare we say this? Why shouldn't we? It's true. We're not afraid of runaway trains, demons, or crazy people. They are the ones who should be afraid of us.

The Earth and everything that exists, walks, crawls or swims, all that grows and all that flows, every grain and plant, every animal, all of it, is ours and belongs to our Lord, the True Son of the Living God.

So move over, Mammon, you disgusting old idol; be gone, you have no power here. Farewell, Satan, and all your lies; the Age of Pisces is over and all the delusions are lifting like fog, burned off by the morning sun. People will laugh and shake their heads.

"Nothing but a big pile of lies," they will say.

"It was some kind of madness, like the Tulip Mania," they will opine.

Ask yourselves, what nonsense is this, that living men need to destroy things that only exist on paper? Legal fictions that have no substance of their own?

They don't exist already.

We are only bound by our beliefs, and as we are bound, so we are unbound. We gave these fictional things form. We gave these fabrications power over us, and we can take back any power we gave them, too.

We won't spend our lives shadow-boxing phantoms created by the Roman Curia.
