

International Public Notice: The Dirty, Dirty Brits Are "At It" Again

By Anna Von Reitz

Only six days before President Trump's Inauguration, Britain inked a long term (100 year) agreement with Ukraine, promising economic and military support to the Zelensky Regime, in exchange for control of Ukraine's Rare Earth Minerals.

So, when Donald Trump suggested that we offer a deal to Ukraine along the same lines, Zelensky had already given away the farm to the Brits.

There was just one problem.

Britain can't possibly provide the security guarantees that the Zelensky Government wants and needs.

So the Brits have a deal they can't fulfill on their own, and probably can't provide even if they talk a majority of European countries into supporting their devious plan economically.

The reality is that Europe only pays 2% of their GDP on defense and is unlikely to embrace a situation that is likely to require a very much larger percentage of GDP being spent on war -- Britain's favorite thing, but not so much esteemed on the Continent.

As for committing troops, Britain may hope to set itself up.

Send a token force of soldiers to Ukraine, and when they are inevitably killed, Britain pulls its NATO card to force the US to come in and support them, thus entrapping us into yet another British intrigue and yet another British-led war in which we pay the price and they reap the profits.

The only reply to this is evident --- to leave NATO and refuse to be played again.

The rest of the world and the people of Europe must recognize this pattern from both WWI and WWII. Britain is always at the bottom of the dog pile and it still is.
