

Force Majeure

By Anna Von Reitz

There are widespread rumors that the world economy may be facing a "Force Majeure" --- the equivalent of an "Act of God" event where the world governments basically say, "Aw, shucks, folks, all bets are off.

All gold certificates are....well, going to be paid off at a much, much reduced rate, and....."

As Jim Willie points out, if the banks get a Force Majeure, they get a Get Out of Jail Free card, but after the COMEX goes bust and the London Gold Exchange goes poof! ---guess what?

The manipulation of gold and silver prices will be gone, which will leave the precious metals market free to escalate as much as it likes.

Just imagine all the Gold bugs rushing around, whispering, "Be still, my heart!"

Then what? Then the "derivatives" rear their ugly heads. What happens with that horrorshow? Another Force Majeure. Another Get Out of Jail Free Card. Except what happens then?

The bond market, the stock exchanges, and everything else collapses, and it becomes completely obvious that all the banks are bankrupt.

All of them.

But here's the really queer thing. All these same banks have been bankrupt, busted, insolvent, since at least 1933.

So how can that be any big surprise to anyone? It's been this way for almost a hundred years.

We already fought two World Wars over it, and, to quote Forrest Gump --- there's nothing more to say about that.

I have never believed in money, so this is not so hard for me to take, but I expect that quite a few otherwise reasonable and sane people will be distressed and depressed and disoriented as they wander around like lost souls muttering, "This was all a game?"

Well, yes, a game. A nasty game. It encourages people to believe in things that simply aren't true, and to take these lies and delusions very seriously, too.

It's really nothing more than a stingy, mean-spirited control mechanism that pleased the Sons of Saturn -- and now, they are gone.

So, don't be afraid of any Force Majeure. Prepare for it, but don't be frightened. It's just a clearing of the decks, a sweeping away of the past.

The True God is forever faithful and the Earth is our inheritance.

Anything that ever had value, still does.

Value yourselves and your children. Value your homes and your sea and your woodlands. Value your friends and your animals and the peace. Value the flowers in your garden.

Value the True God and the stars above. Know that you are all wealthy beyond the wildest dreams of Midas.

And fear nothing at all.
