

International Public Notice: The Global Grapevine

By Anna Von Reitz

Yes, we are all about love, goodwill, harmony, and peace. These are things we make manifest in our lives, these are things we desire for everyone globally.

But, we are done with evil.

What does that mean?

Imagine that you can look through a doorway into another world, and you can see that everyone is happy and having a good time, they are gardening and some are reading and some are having lunch and some are playing games; there are healthy trees and gardens and a pleasant lakeshore just beyond, kids are playing, dogs are romping, cats sleeping in the sun and it all looks so inviting and beautiful..... what you have to understand is that that world is in our own grasp, according to our own decisions.

We have to choose it.

When we choose it, we create it. It's as simple as that.

Love is a decision that we make everyday.

That's not just a platitude or a figure of speech. That's quantum physics. That's the ultimate reality. What we think, what we feel, we create.

So if you decide to love, consistently, with firm decision, the physical reality begins to form itself into the world you envision as surely and certainly as water flows downhill. As other people join you in that decision and begin envisioning their "happy place" and the world they want to live in, the power and amplification grows.

Eventually, it gets to the point where we can just forget about what the liars and war-mongers and crooked people are doing, because our vision and joy overwhelms them. We don't have to argue with them or try to reform them. It's not our job to soften their hearts.

By softening our own hearts and turning away from evil ourselves, we create the reality we desire. They and their dark visions and nightmares lose all power in this world, and sooner or later, they have to "catch the vibe" or move on to a world where they can play war games and immerse themselves in crime---without us.

We choose not to go there.

So you see, it really is a matter of decision, and we have made the conscious decision that we are individually and collectively done, finished, and seen all we need to see about evil forevermore.

A long time ago, so we are told, Satan and Eve were placed in competition with each other, his children against her children. And the contest? Learn how to tell the difference between good and evil.

We've done that. We are done with evil. No more lessons to learn.

So when we hear of an elderly couple being charged $3000 to get a bank account and get their political status corrected, services that we are offering for free to everyone on a global basis, we recognize that as evil.

And we are done with evil.

So, if we catch anyone doing anything like that, especially when they are doing it to people who are uneducated, the elderly who don't have computer skills, or people who don't have access to computers --- people who are vulnerable --- we know that we've made a mistake.

We've let someone who is still dedicated to evil through the doorway into our world --- somebody who still cares more about money than people, more about "making a killing" than preserving life.

And we kick them out of the Global Family and shut down their accounts and turn our backs, because nobody who loves evil belongs in our world. They can go on scrabbling around in their snakepit, stealing and gouging and sneaking and lying.

All by themselves, so far as we are concerned.

It's not paradoxical that we use our judgement in these matters.

As you dedicate yourself to the truth, you come to see the truth more clearly.

Those who have cast themselves out of the Global Family by doing evil things to others have made that decision for themselves. They had the same choice all of us do.

We chose love. They chose evil.

They could have done the work for free, or charged just a little to pay for paper and ink and equipment cost related to the service. If they had charged $10 per person instead of $1500, we wouldn't be having this conversation, and they wouldn't be looking at a closed door.

There are only two laws in the world we are building. The Law of Gratitude and The Law of Love.

If these people had obeyed either one, they wouldn't have charged an elderly couple $30, much less $3000.

They would have looked at themselves, so richly blessed to have computers and computer skills, so richly blessed to have been enabled by others to claim their birthright and have a Global account ---and instead of charging high prices and blocking access to the same blessings for the poor and the elderly, they would have been eager to help.

They weren't of this mindset, and instead tried to capitalize on our work and gouge people on top of that, which proves beyond a doubt that: (1) they aren't done with evil; and (2) they don't belong among us.

Can people change their minds and make different decisions? Can they decide to love?

Yes, they can---- but, when we say, "Done with evil!" --- it's not a slogan. It's a way of life.

Let all those who enter into the Global Family be aware that while nobody here will harm them, they can still harm themselves by doing evil, selfish, uncaring things to others.

This is a more profound statement than it might at first appear.

When we hurt other people, we hurt ourselves. We may not be able to perceive that initially, but over time, this becomes self-evident. You can't stub your toe without hurting your whole body.

So when they overcharged these Elders, they hurt the Family of Man -- the Global Family, and they hurt themselves, too, though that was not the result they expected and not the short term result they experienced.

At first, they thought they had gotten away with it, and looked around eagerly for more victims, but someone always talks. Someone asks, "Did it cost you that much?"

And the astonishing answer comes back, "No, it was free. I didn't pay for anything...."

We have received several questions today about a "strongly worded" warning sent out by Global Family Bank. They didn't get into the details of the incidents that prompted their message and why they were sending it at this time.

But with a great many people needing these services, there is preemptive value in these early incidents of scalping and gouging. Just because there are a million people and demand for help navigating the Global portal is high, doesn't mean you can charge whatever the market will bear.

Remember the only two Laws: the Law of Gratitude and the Law of Love ----and act accordingly.
