

A Hard Answer for a Simple Question

By Anna Von Reitz

I have been asked -- why did our Founders set our government up with a corporate structure? I have also been asked why our State Assemblies don't elect Governors? One answer relates to both questions.

It's pretty simple, really. The existence of government requires there to be a "government of the government". It's the "government of the government" that has a corporate structure, not our actual government.

The office of Governor is an office in the "government of the government", not our actual government, so, of course, our State Assemblies don't elect Governors. We elect State Assembly Chairmen, instead, who are the lawfully elected Spokespersons for the individual State Assemblies.

In the same way, we don't elect "representatives" to our version of Congress, we elect "fiduciary delegates" instead.

There has to be a structure in place to control and direct the bureaucrats, political appointees, and other public employees quite apart from and, in addition to, what we define as our government.

Some people call it "the shadow government". I call it the political bureaucracy. Because "the government of the government" looks and functions like a government, it can be mistaken for the actual government, and that is what has happened here.

In our case and the case of the other countries that have been impacted by the British Territorial Fraud Scheme, the bureaucracy has gone wild and overgrown the confines set for it.

The Founding Fathers were well-aware of this problem because they had the example of King Louis XIV's France building up to a powder-keg in their faces.

In that example, the French Monarchy, which was the actual government, was overwhelmed by the French Bureaucracy. The actual government was brought down by the weight, corruption, and intrigues of the "government of the government".

A handful of Royal Courtiers and Bureaucrats conspired for a period of decades prior to the French Revolution to siphon off the vast majority of France's wealth right under the nose of a weak, ignorant, and dependent King. They deployed all this purloined wealth in the most lavish and ostentatious building projects and parties imaginable, leaving the half-starved people of France to suffer.

It was only a matter of time until the poor had suffered enough.

Our Founders saw the French Revolution on the horizon, and so, they took measures to build a strictly limited and counter-balanced structure throughout their plan for government, intending that no such unholy alliance of political cronies and bureaucrats combined with weak or immoral executives, would ever mislead our country into a similar morass of corruption and injustice.

The Founders planned well, and bequeathed to us an admirable self-regulating system; however, their children promptly forgot how it was supposed to work, and when beset with numerous foreign intrigues and distractions, the cronies and bureaucrats here proved to be the equals of their counterparts in France two centuries ago.

Sans the silk breeches and fancy garters, of course.

I suppose I could stop there and let what should be self-evident, be self-evident, but experience has taught me that I must toil on and exhaust my powers of description before I am fully understood:

After the open hostilities of the Civil War ended--- a "war" which was a Mercenary Conflict, and not strictly speaking a war at all--- the conflict was left unresolved, and the country was left in the "protective custody" of the Union Army, and its Commander-in-Chief, who forsook the checks and balances our Founders designed, and began acting as a military dictator empowered to issue Executive Orders.

Although the President of the United States, like the President of any company or corporation, had always had the right to issue orders to his own staff and employees, Lincoln took it to a whole new level.

Lincoln asserted a non-existent and non-consensual executive power to allow the Union Army to occupy this country in the guise of a military protectorate, and he established the rules of this Protectorate by issuing the very first Executive Order known as General Order 100, also known as the Lieber Code.

The Union Army was acting as a Mercenary and Expeditionary Force under the direction of the British Crown at the time, and it has continued in that status ever since. The American Raj was born, and it was and is a "government of the government", not the government of this country.

The actual government owed to this country was and is vested in our civilian State Assemblies ("state assemblies" when Latin conventions are used) but these political bodies were thrown into disarray during the Civil War and met infrequently in private homes, churches, and schools during the conflict. Our actual unincorporated Federation of States, doing business as The United States of America ever since 1776, was similarly impacted.

Even though our actual international government and our actual States never took part in the so-called Civil War, the conflict destroyed so much infrastructure, prevented so much communication, and cost so many lives, that the disruption alone was a great obstruction to orderly continuance of our government "of, for, and by" the people of this country.

Once ensconced in Washington, DC, the Union Generals realized that the only thing standing between them and a very profitable oligarchy was Abraham Lincoln, and they were encouraged to commit both murder and treason by members of Lincoln's Cabinet, most especially William H. Seward, his Secretary of State, and Salmon P. Chase, his Treasury Secretary.

Seward was a megalomaniac about westward expansion, a passion he shared with the greedy British Queen who was busy building an Empire and who dreamed of vast gold reserves waiting to be discovered in the western United States. Salmon P. Chase, who engineered Lincoln's Greenbacks, was persuaded to give up this singular experiment in self-funded national currency and retreated to the comfortable indebted servitude offered by the Federal Reserve and the budding central bank system.

It is not a coincidence that General and Mrs. Ulysses S Grant, who were supposed to attend the Ford Theater that fateful night with Lincoln and Mary Todd Lincoln, took a powder and a train to Ohio instead.

A month after the debacle at Ford's Theater, our Great-Great-Granduncle, Clintwood Belcher and his younger brother, James, were riding home to West Virginia with the Great Seals of the United States and The United States of America in their saddlebags. Like Lincoln, they were attacked with murderous ferocity, their horses shot from under them. In the melee, young James escaped into the dense brush, and Clintwood, rounding up a loose mount belonging to one of the thinly disguised Union soldiers, rode for the Northwest frontier.

Clintwood and James would spend the rest of their lives on the run. The Great Seals were stolen and handed over to the Federal Reserve, and thereafter appeared in the Philippines in the hands of the "Monetary One" office which is merely presumed to be our Trustee--- without our agreement to any of the non-consensual arrangements that have been made "for" us by the usurping British Territorial Protectorate.

Ironically, both Lincoln, a traitor and pawn for the British Crown, and our relatives who represented the actual government of this country, were treated the same way by the Union Generals, who went on to establish their sub rosa oligarchy without telling the American People a word about it.

In order to cover up their heinous betrayal and usurpation, these same Union Generals conspired with members of the Territorial "Rump" Congress to establish Military Districts overlaying the actual States of the Union. After that, they organized new British Territorial State-of-State organizations, to replace the American States of State that existed prior to the Civil War and forced the remaining State Assemblies to write new State of State Constitutions facilitating this substitution scheme. The same vermin assumed the right to place our State assets into State Trusts controlled by themselves and their minions. Thus, we have suffered a foreign de facto military occupation benefiting the British Crown since 1865, and nobody has been the wiser.

This is the reason that our country and our world has been kept in a state of near-constant war ever since.

Soldiers, including Mercenary Soldiers, make their fortunes via war. Their careers are spawned by war. Their coffers are filled by war. Their personal power is increased by war. Demand for their services is increased by war. So, the military oligarchs in charge of this charade naturally want more and more war, war, war and war, no matter what the people of this country want -- and their British Territorial overlords who are giving them a feeble land claim, encourage them in this, because war is profitable for them, too.

From there our original and intended and lawful government has continued on as a shadow government of a different kind, an old, faithful, American government that has simply refused to die, and which has slowly taken root again and now takes meaning and body as Americans claim their birthright and exercise their guarantees and assemble their republican State Assemblies.

The "government of the government" has continued on with its graft, deceit, and corruption, until today the Generals in charge think nothing of sacrificing thousands of American lives as they have done in Paradise, California, and now, again, in Lahaina, Hawaii.

Not to be outdone, the Municipal theocracy ruling as a Congressional Oligarchy in charge of the City of Washington, DC, has become --- if possible, more corrupt than the foreign military protectorate, and has presented its own version of a "government of the government". As a result, we, Americans, have been the goats paying for two highly corrupt bureaucracies, which we have carried on our shoulders like huge granite blocks.

It is completely predictable that both unencumbered bureaucracies have grown exponentially in size and power and have sucked the lifeblood out of our country like so many leeches on a steer.

They have done the same to every other country they have "enfranchised", which includes British Territorial military protectorates established in all the former Commonwealth countries, seventeen western European nations, and Japan. And Municipal Corporation franchises have followed.

In the 1930's, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, formally and officially sacrificed all the Municipal citizens of the United States, and consigned them to abject slavery in an effort to dig his United States, Incorporated, out of red ink. He also created more than 350 new alphabet soup agencies and hired over a million additional Federal Employees to staff these new "administrative agencies"--- thereby vastly and non-consensually expanding the size and scope, power and expense, of the Federal Government.

The ineluctable process of cronyism and top-heavy bureaucracy combined with immoral (in FDR's case) and weak (think Jimmy Carter) executives had begun, and while the people of this country have slumbered on, the situation and their own condition has only gotten worse.

The same conditions that caused the French Revolution are ripening on our shores, and the Principals responsible -- the British Monarch, the Lord Mayor of the Inner City of London, and the Pope -- are sitting on their velvet tuffets.

All the British know how to do is ferment the dog pile and threaten violence of one kind or another, all the Lord Mayor knows how to do is to hide together with the so-called Lords of the Admiralty, and the Pope --- well, once in a while he does something vaguely moral.

The only way out of this mess without a lot of bloodshed and destruction is for the people of this country and all the other countries impacted by this fraudulent military occupation scheme to wake up and pull the plug on the bankers financing all this rot, populate our lawful governments again, and re-establish civilian control of the "governments of the governments" in this country.

In that eventuality, which is our only real hope, a lot of government bureaucrats will have to find new and more productive jobs, and many members of the military will be re-tasked to fight the real enemies of mankind -- things like ignorance, poverty, lack of basic hygiene, polluted water, and famine caused by idiotic agricultural policies promoted by corporate gurus who don't know the backside of a cow from an apple tree.

That is not such a bad outcome, and infinitely to be desired instead of the alternatives which involve millions of lives lost, vast amounts of valuable property torched, and incalculable amounts of natural resources destroyed.

The final answer to your question is that our Founders did not leave us a government based on a corporate hierarchy. They left us a government based on republican State Assemblies populated by average people from all walks of life, all colors, all religions, all kinds. They also left us two "governments of the governments" --- bureaucracies designed to deliver limited government services. It's the "governments of governments" that have proliferated and become corrupt, and the Principals responsible for their operations, too, that have failed us and violated their own service contracts.

We stand here, the lawful civilian government owed to the people of this country, returned against all odds from "over the sea". We have made our demands from our purported Trustees and stand in our role as the Donors of all physical assets, owed all credit based upon those assets. There can be no doubt that we are exactly who we say we are, that we have the knowledge, the records, the provenance, and the lawful right to act as the long-lost civilian government and the right to receive back control of our assets and the right to direct the activities of our public employees -- all rights that we now choose to exercise, so as to bring a peaceful end to war and corruption.

The other Principal Parties to the Constitutional Contracts have been fully informed and we are anticipating their decision --- either to continue on their reckless and dishonorable course of administering an illegitimate military protectorate in the face of the lawful government, or to capitulate and peaceably return control to us.

If they don't return our assets, our credit, our land, and our Good Names unharmed, then their egregious criminality will stand before the entire planet. Nobody will trust them again. Nobody will want to do business with them. The true cost they will bear for their dishonor and betrayal will be the loss of their reputation and their ability to conduct diplomacy.

China, the Ukraine, and any other country they might subourne to do their bidding, will see how deceitful, selfish, unreliable, and perverse the other Principals have proven to be in their business relationships with us, and be forewarned of what they could expect in turn.
