

An Example of the Idiocy

By Anna Von Reitz

Quote:

"Rotary International, the WHO, UNICEF, GAVI, WEF, and the Gates Foundation have poured tens of billions of dollars into vaccinating malnourished children who lack sanitation, water, refrigeration and education. Instead of pushing money into polio, measles and rotavirus vaccines, think of the global problems that would have been solved if those same dollars had been allocated to the most important health intervention in the world's history: clean water."

This quote comes from Dr. Sherri Tenpenny and is part of a more extensive article here: <https://expose-news.com/2024/07/14/clean-water-saved-the-world-not-vaccination/>

It's simple and it's true. Clean drinking water and basic water recycling and sanitation are far more effective than any amount of vaccine in preventing diseases of all kinds.

No vaccination in the world has ever had the impact on public health that simple water sanitation has had.

Continuing to push vaccination or patent drugs in the absence of clean water is like preaching abstinence to alcoholics in a pub: a nice thought, so far as it goes.

We have to arrive at a point where we can do what is practical (clean water and sanitation for everyone) and meanwhile test to see if any form of vaccination is actually effective.

Since beginning our investigation, it is more apparent than ever that there is no solid groundwork proving the efficacy of vaccination.

You would think that such a sacred cow would have tons of proof validating the efficacy of vaccines to prevent disease and prevent the transmission of disease, but no.

School children who are "fully vaccinated" are 30% more likely to develop diseases and co-morbidities including cancers than unvaccinated children.

There are no such convincing studies linking use of vaccines and reduction in incidence or severity or transmission of disease.

How's that for a Big Surprise?

Even with regard to transmission of diseases like Measles and Smallpox and Diphtheria, there isn't any convincing correlation between beneficial results from the use of vaccines versus herd immunity.

In other words, if we didn't do vaccines at all, much less the over 90 "childhood vaccines" now mandated, we would be just as well off. Minus the trauma of the injection and pain and swelling and possible infection, possible anaphylactic shock, and infection of the injection site, that is.

What we also find are an astonishing number of synchronicities in which industrial pollution and diseases resulting from industrial pollution are palmed off as naturally occurring maladies conquered by vaccination.

Polio, for example, has the same exact symptoms as poisoning and neurotoxicity caused by water soluble pesticides that were marketed in the 1940s and 1950s by the usual suspects --- Monsanto and Dow Chemical.

When these ill-begotten pesticides were withdrawn from the market, polio disappeared and it was safe to go swimming again--- but not, as we assumed, due to the Salk vaccine.

The penile cancers caused by Agent Orange just happen to be identical to those caused by vaccines administered against tropical malaria.

It is more than past time that the chemical corporations and defense contractors paid for their sins, including the most recent round of deaths by injection of experimental "vaccines" that were already known to provide no benefit against prevention of disease or transmission of disease.

These mRNA experimental vaccines were already known to have a seven year 100% mortality rate, but Pfizer wasn't required to publish these experimental results. Read that: everyone injected can expect to be dead within seven (7) years of receiving the injections, absent some kind of divine or practical intercession.

If you are as sickened by this self-serving commercialization as we are, take a moment to remember your own instinctive resistance to vaccines and your intuitive mistrust.

Isn't it obvious, in retrospect, that vaccines don't prevent disease and don't prevent transmission of disease? We didn't really need 20,000 studies to prove that point.

Vaccines provide a convenient excuse to charge people money for services and pawn off commercial liability for the harm caused by industrial pollution. They do nothing to prevent disease or its transmission, according to those who sell these worthless products to us.

So why have we spent billions of dollars on vaccines instead of clean water and sanitation?
