

Jubilee

By Anna Von Reitz

Among the Hebrews -- the true Hebrews -- even to this day, Jubilee comes every seven years. Every seven years, observant Jews are required to "hit reset"---and release all the debts that people owe them. This is understandably difficult to do, and harder for those to whom much is owed.

Underlying the practice and the concept is: (1) a showing of faith in God, that He can give again that which is given away in obedience to Him, and (2) hope that as debt is forgiven to others, it can also be forgiven to us (think of all the debts that you can never repay, because people died or you lost track of them?) and (3) an understanding that the release of debt is like spreading manure on a fallow field--- a way to regenerate and revive the economic engines the same way that resting and fertilizing a field restores it and enables it to go on producing in years to come.

Every seven times seven years -- 49 years -- comes a "Super Jubilee" in which the most serious debts are forgiven and in ancient times, this meant that each man was able to return home to his ancestral plot and take possession of land and homes that had been lost through debt or misfortune of one kind or another, so that land set aside for--- say, the Tribe of Benjamin -- ultimately returned to members of that tribe, no matter what went before. The Fathers could not, by their misfortunes, weaknesses, or debts, ultimately disinherit the sons. The apportionment of the land was meant to be an everlasting inheritance, and the health and beauty of the land was meant to be a testament to the wisdom, care-taking ability, and diligence of the men it belonged to.

Meant to be.

But as we can see, the wisdom of God in these matters has not been followed by many, many generations of men, so the whole concept of "Jubilee" and its spiritual and practical result has been lost. Those who have acquired great sums of debt have not released it for at least eight hundred years. Instead, they have mindlessly acquired more and more and more, until the concept of debt and credit has become totally out of balance and contrary to any measure of reality.

Instead of the world's economy being periodically restored and re-calibrated, the rich have gone on getting rich and the poor have gone on getting poorer, until 1% of the population controls all the wealth---and they still mindlessly grub for more, even though they have more than they could ever spend or want, far more than they could ever imagine doing anything with, while others starve. This is precisely what Jubilee is meant to prevent.

Consider the spectacle that the world now presents to God: millions upon millions of people are homeless thanks to the bank-built Foreclosure Fraud Machine, and, at the same time, all those homes are standing vacant and decaying. The banks can't use them. There are no new millions of magically empowered competent buyers ready to move in.

The "field" of the economy has not been renewed and grinds on merely on the strength of new population growth providing new consumers, but increasingly, these new consumers are born into a world already supporting an insurmountable debt--- so they have less and less to spend, and more of their lives must be consumed paying back debts accrued by ancestors.

Because we haven't had a real Jubilee in over 800 years and because all the wealth has been locked up and super-concentrated and otherwise manipulated, I know people who regularly deal with quadrillions of dollars worth of debt and credit and they seem to think that this is sane, even though they realize that median income for over half the world's population has decreased and Over half of all the people on Earth live in moderate to severe poverty--- they just shrug, have another martini, and seem to think that, well, this is way things are----and so far as they can remember, the way things have always been.

We have told these people that the debt has to go away. We have ordered them to put up three sums of credit equal to the entire present world debt in order to permanently eradicate it and make way for a system of credit to replace the debt system. You can imagine martinis hitting the wall and spurting through noses from Boston to Bangkok.

The first credit, known as the Reconciliation Credit, is to counterbalance and wipe all the present debt off the books. This is basically just a bookkeeping transaction that wipes away the accumulated debt. Poof! It's gone. This includes all debt, so while the banks are bemoaning the "loss" of all the debt they were holding over others, they are also being relieved of all the debt that they owe. In a sense, this is the only true reset of the system that is possible.

The second credit, known as the Atonement Credit, is to resupply the banks and atone for the evils that have been visited upon people worldwide.

We have told those responsible that banks can no longer function as mindless, irresponsible profit-making machines. If they want to stay in business, they need to restructure as "B" corporations--- meaning that they have a beneficial mission and responsibilities above and beyond profit-making. Additionally, the Atonement Credit will not be loaned at interest and will not be loaned to corporations. It will be made available to unincorporated businesses and individual people, with the banks only getting a service fee.

The third credit, known as the Redemption Credit, is to establish a "sinking fund" that covers unavoidable losses by making new investments in corporations and technology and infrastructure at varying rates of return, similar to what we have now.

These concepts have been met with amazement, incredulity, and a lot of "Wha...what? What? How? Huh?" --- and even with some sneering and obstruction. What, we are asked, can possibly form the basis for all this new credit?

Well, the base problem is always the value that we place on things, is it not?

How much is a man's life worth? To him? To his family? And yet, how many lives have been lost due to lack of money? Wasted in senseless wars?

How many lives have been truncated and limited by lack of money? --translated into lack of education, lack of opportunity, lack of access?

And what is "money" really, but a "symbol of value"---that is, an idol? Like a little carved wooden figure or an icon painting can be a symbol of saint?

This is all arbitrary, all a game, a matter of digits and little pieces of metal pretending to be meaningful, when all that is meaningful is here and now and alive in this moment. The only ones that give value to anything are---- you.

So what do you value? A man or the image of a man? A real strawberry, or a photo of one?

Right now, The United States of America (Unincorporated) holds all the incorporated governments on Earth in debt to it and all those corporations formed as franchises under the auspices of these governments, too.

All those gigantic, powerful corporations? Owned by us. All those powerful governments? Owned by us. All the comings and goings, the armies, the agencies, the traffic on the seas? Owned by us. Over 95% of all the incorporated entities were chartered right here under our (abused) delegated power. So guess who controls the fate of all these corporations?

We are calling for a Jubilee and a transition in which the current debt system is forever changed---and while the bankers are sneering, at the end of the day, there is plenty of credit available to fund our plan, and it belongs to us.

The only problem is that the bankers were all set up, ready, thinking that the actual government --- the sovereign level unincorporated government of The United States of America --- was never going to come forward and claim all those juicy corporate assets.

They were ready to pull what they did before with our land assets, with the gold that FDR confiscated, and so much more---- bankrupt the shell, wait, and when the assets were left unclaimed, come forward and make a claim on abandonment as Secondary Creditors.

The banks used other people's assets every step of the way, and now those actual Priority Creditors are punching their own tickets. What's the world coming to? Crooks can't even be crooks anymore.

The other thing that we propose is the end of all human enslavement worldwide. An end to CUSIP bonds and surety bonds and much of the bond system as we now know it, is necessary to put an end to the debt system. So we will be retiring those bonds and the systems supporting them. When people ask--- what will replace them? Our answer is that there is no need for such a system.

The dishonest banks and incorporated governments built up such a Slush Pile for themselves that there is no longer any need for anyone to ever pay taxes again, ever indenture themselves again, or ever stand as sureties again. Simply re-investing what is already set aside in those mammoth pension and internal and external "government" investment accounts will generate more than enough income to pay for all governmental services and utilities from now on.

Imagine a world in which people are free of the burden of government? A world in which they never have to pay taxes or utility bills again? A world in which they are not saddled with the debts of others? Where there is more than enough money to go around and more than enough jobs to do? Where corporations are held accountable? And where corporations pay for the cost of their own insurance?

While you are at it, imagine turning the Earth back into a peaceful garden. It can be done. It's just a matter of what you value.
