

Tired of "Project Looking-Glass" Misinformation

By Anna Von Reitz

Remember the Harry Potter movies? Remember when Harry stumbled into an attic room and found the mirror that showed him his fondest desires? Well, that's "Project Looking Glass" in the actual world. It also shows the "Lookers" what they want to see, but not what is true.

So no wonder that nine out of ten "Lookers" saw a future in which they were exalted and in control of the whole world.

No wonder that they saw the population of the world vastly reduced. Their own ego-centricity and false beliefs mandated that.

No wonder they saw what was left of humanity (after they themselves spawned a "limited" nuclear war and hid out from the results in Deep Underground Bases (DUMBS)) subjected to their rule.

And so on.

They even coined their own special code phrases --- like "future proves past". and "rule of destiny".

It never occurred to them that all the Looking Glass reveals is them--- their evils, their prejudices, their intents, their desires, their beliefs.

That is the purpose of the Looking-Glass technology-- to tell the truth about them, and reveal the inner eye of the Beholder, not to show the truth about anything else.

The Looking-Glass can only reflect back what it sees in the Looker.

So what these men have seen via Project Looking Glass is only their own ego revealed. Nothing more.

And they even missed the point of the revelation: judgment.

In ancient times this technology was used to judge the motives and guilt of individuals by revealing their true desires.

Thus a righteous person can look into the mirror and nothing but compassion and justice and kindness will be revealed, but a madman's ego will also be revealed.

Such is the mentality of madmen, that instead of taking the mirror's message as a warning and a means to re-evaluate the truth about oneself --- and change oneself --- they seized upon it as an instrument of prophecy, telling them all that they wanted to hear.

As my husband asked under his breath at dinner tonight, "God, are people stupid?"

Too often we just don't get it, and Project Looking-Glass is a good example of people not getting it.

So are electric cars.

Don't we understand that 90% of all electricity comes from oil and gas? And that at each step of energy production, there is a loss of efficiency?

That is, if you burn oil and gas the direct conversion into motion via a gas engine is far more efficient and less wasteful than converting it to electricity and then using electricity to propel a car? Or a train? Or anything else?

What possible excuse-- beyond political cupidity-- does a "scientist" like Elon Musk have for promoting electric cars?

What possible excuse--- beyond political cupidity-- does a "doctor" like Anthony Fauci have for promoting a bogus pandemic?

Do we all realize that six months into this farce there has been no actual specific virus strain isolated as a causative agent for any of this hoo-rah?

And even more damning, there has been no effort to begin the work necessary to isolate any such virus?

What are they testing for? Our stupidity factor?

It's time for us to wake up. All the way. These "governmental services corporations" exist to sell us governmental services.

When we aren't buying enough of their services to suit them, they create phony crisis scenarios as an excuse to charge us for crisis-related services.

A billion doses of vaccine for a virus they haven't even identified.
Ten million ventilator units that aren't needed and only harm the patients.
$300,000.00 per patient in kick-backs to State of State franchises.

Simple as that.

None of this has anything to do with factual reality or health or energy efficiency.

It's all nothing but lies and reflections of self-interest, like the Looking-Glass---the true purpose of which has continued to elude the Perpetrators, even to this late hour.
