

Meet the Raj

By Anna Von Reitz

Mahatma Gandhi faced off the brutal Raj in India and now, we meet them here.

Make no mistake, most of the world is facing the same Raj today. We simply didn't know who they were or how they were operating, but now that we do, it is apparent that the same British Commercial Feudalism that kept India strangled for the better part of a hundred years has done the same here and throughout much of the rest of the world, too.

These are people so brutal and cheap that they would keep poor farmers from harvesting salt from the sea -- salt that they needed to live in India's hot climate, salt that they needed to preserve their food, salt that God gave them for free --- but for which the British Raj charged top dollar and defended their evil practice with guns.

The same British Raj opened fire on unarmed men, women and children at Amritsar with machine guns and rifles, killing hundreds in a few minutes of sustained fire----and exposing the evil of the British Government to the entire world, including the folks at home.

We--- the Americans, Canadians, Aussies, Germans, Japanese, South Africans -- need to show the same resolve as the Indian People and expose the modern British Raj for what they still are: brutal commercial mercenaries who have no part in a decent world.

Once you realize that you are dealing with commercial mercenaries on the land and pirates on the sea, posing as members of "your" legitimate government, you are empowered to deal with the real circumstance and threat that this represents.

It isn't the Russians or the Chinese threatening us. The Russians have been our friends, even as they have been shaking their heads at our stupidity. The Chinese just want to be paid and able to live decent peaceful lives. The real danger here has arisen from within, as the result of usurpation, fraud, deceit and gross Breach of Trust and Commercial Contract by the British-controlled Territorial United States.

That is the sad and sorry truth that we must face. Britain's Government has betrayed its own people in the same way that it has betrayed its Allies. It has consciously sown the seeds of war in the Middle East and has adopted evil foreign policies seeking to promote the same kinds of "endless" endemic conflict throughout the world by forced importation of Islamic people who have been forced from their ancestral homes by the same brutal, insane British foreign policies employed in the Middle East three generations ago.

Why? Because they profit from war.

They gain advantage from dividing people into groups and labeling them.

Apparently, they are neither very creative nor very industrious, and this is the only way they can imagine of making a living on their small pieces of rock--- to cause endless war and profit from it.

Britain is the problem. It has always been the problem. It will always be the problem until we all wake up and realize who the real "Enemy" is and has always been. I do not suggest that the British people are evil, but I know that their government well and truly is.
