

More Proof

By Anna Von Reitz

The Marines have been denied religious exemption from the experimental vaccine program, and many of them, men and officers alike, must be scratching their heads and thinking --- WTF?

The men who fight for the Constitution don't enjoy its protections?

That's right.

They don't.

It's counterintuitive to say the least, but that is the way it is, and the way it has always been.

Like other members of the military service, when a Marine "enlists" he enters the foreign international jurisdiction of the Territorial United States, and subjects himself to its law--- which does not include our Constitutions, but does include such foreign law forms as the Spanish Law of the Inquisition.

If our boys and girls were given full disclosure of the results of their service contract, a great many of them might think twice about joining the Armed Services. So they are simply not told.

This results in invalidating their enlistment contracts, and they can opt out at will whenever they want out ---- but that isn't told to them, either.

Such knowledge is "bad for morale". Better to enslave them under false pretenses....

Anyway..... I have been saying this for years, and if anyone had listened, the Marines could have saved themselves the bother and expense of court proceedings.

If the Marines want to avoid the jab, they have to play Bill Gates's Game --- just like Simon Says, and they need to say, "I'm allergic to the serum."

And that is absolutely true for everyone on Earth.

It can't be argued.

It's exactly what Mr. Gates said when it came time for him and his children to be jabbed. He politely refused the photo op and the shot, by blinking his pale, lizard-like eyes, and saying, "I'm allergic to the serum."

So are you. So are all the Marines who are refusing the jab.

And you don't have to say anything else or more.

No lawsuits. No constitutional issues. No tests, No arguments.

The other point that needs to be driven home like a tenpenny nail is that once you enlist in the military, it is necessary to formally withdraw from their jurisdiction at the end of your tour of duty, however long that is.

Otherwise, the legal presumption stands that you chose to voluntarily remain in the foreign Territorial international jurisdiction and never went home.

And if you never go home to the States, you remain subject to the foreign Territorial laws, and never get to enjoy the Constitutional Guarantees.

To go home after military service, you need to send a simple Severance Letter to the commander of your branch of the service, simply saying that you are returning home to your State of the Union and your birthright political status effective with your date of discharge from the service.

Send this letter via Registered Mail Return Receipt Requested or via Express Mail with tracking, and save the receipts, so that you can prove that you formally severed that attachment.

My heart goes out to our faithful soldiers who have so often been abused by the verminous British Territorial Government and its corporate subcontractors. For generations, they have been lied to and used as cheap mercenaries in wars-for-profit that benefited foreign principals, and which cost us our lives and our resources.

Let this be the final year that we are chained by such ignorance to the bad faith and guile of the European Principals responsible for this entire Mess.
