

Non-Negotiable

By Anna Von Reitz

In the world of commerce everything is negotiable. Everything.

Any offer is possible, no matter how big, how small or how outrageous.

Remember The Three Musketeers?

I offer to cut off your head.

You offer to cut off my head and feed it to your dog.

I offer to cut off your head, feed it to my pigs and hang your naked decapitated body at the nearest crossroad....

And on and on like this. Mostly it's just talk of a wild and intentionally inflated form, full of threats and wheedling and counter-threats and more wheedling.

But when fraud is involved and things that actually cause harm to people, all this offer and counter-offer politesse turns ugly and things get dicey.

I am afraid we are entering the ugly stage.

Today's patchwork of military disinformation and scuttlebutt (more butt than scuttle) includes the following:

1. Joe Biden's Administration hired 20,000 Mercenaries to go in and try to topple the Ukrainian Government— unsuccessfully.
2. To prevent war with Russia over this and restore normal diplomatic relations with Ukraine, Biden and Harris have been removed and —get this— Al Gore has been inaugurated as “President” in place of Biden, and the rationale is that this is okay, because the 2000 Election was stolen from Gore by the Bush organization.

This reflects rival elements in the military fighting with each other and trying to jockey into a position of plausible authority in the public’s eye.

The Dem Lobby that is smart enough to know that Joe-the-Thug has gone too far are trying to pull their coals out of the fire and trying to find excuses for doing it.

But— “Al Gore won the 2000 Election so he is the rightful President now!”—— really?

Not.

We can believe that Gore was cheated out of the 2000 election by the Bush Machine. That’s believable enough.

But it doesn’t matter now because then was then and now is now and the Dem Party didn’t run Al Gore for President in 2020.

They could have, but didn’t.

So they are stuck.
