

The Old Lady Explains

By Anna Von Reitz

Government Central Banks were created to control the flow of commodities— and money and credit currencies , like wheat and soy bellies, are commodities. This is state-sanctioned crime, because commodity rigging is a crime— if Joe Blow does it.

This is why commodity brokers and stock brokers are licensed, too. This is why Central Banks and Stock Exchanges are (supposed to be) regulated.

Merchant banks are created to engage in international trade, which is what we think of as private business between unincorporated entities, using asset-backed money to trade goods and services. It is called “trade” because actual physical assets are being exchanged. My bag of peanuts for your apple is barter; my apple for your silver dime is trade.

Commercial banks deal in various kinds of “commercial paper”— stocks, bonds, certificates, insurance, debentures, promissory notes and credit instruments such as Letters of Credit, for example. These banks serve incorporated entities since commerce itself is defined as business between two incorporated entities.

Now that you can observe this for yourselves you will better understand it when I say all the commercial banks worldwide are bankrupt and all the central banks are guilty of mammoth crimes beyond the state sanctioned variety crimes they are allowed to indulge in.

As a result, the International Trade Banks are the only ones still standing and capable of translating values. The form this takes does not matter so long as people still have access to abundant cash assets — without which everyone would be enslaved.

Read that — digital currency is okay so far as it goes— your funds are routinely translated into digits as it is, so it isn't that digital currency is bad— it's that banks controlling the flow of digital currency, banks with the ability to shut down your accounts without agreement, banks that can arbitrarily turn your credit cards on and off, would have complete coercive economic power if we do not immediately and with prejudice insist on maintaining a cash economy wherein people have physical control over defined asset-backed cash currency.

And all this, plus the biggest bust in commodity rigging history and crimes beyond the scope of this quick summation — is what the PTW are arguing and struggling over.

Meantime, note that Goldman-Sachs, the IRS, and the Territorial (British) Federal Reserve have so far moved to China— obviously planning to set up shop there and do the same things to Chinese workers that they have done here.

Really? Will China be foolish enough to eat the Tapeworms? Stay tuned. We fully intend to take up the criminal nature of these entities with the Chinese Government.

See this article and over 3600 others on Anna's website here: www.annavonreitz.com

To support this work look for the Donate button on this website.