

Great Quote from RichieAllen.co.uk

By Anna Von Reitz

Here's one to think about (seriously) from RichieAllen.co.uk:

"Let's rise above the triangle of hell-on-earth with its three players: victim (dead and wounded), culprit (Muslims), saviour (government, with extension of the "state of emergency" and "reinforcement of security"). Let us instead see the reality which is hiding behind this adversity: an evolutionary gift, forcing human beings to once again find their true identity as sovereign individuals. Then our terror will give way to gratitude towards the actors of these unfortunate events."

I would have added a long, long list of "culprits"---- politicians, blacks, whites, Christians, Capitalists, Communists---- indeed, the list of those we blame is longer than my arm or my patience to sit down and write.

Richie has given us the more soulful version of the Hegelian Dialectic -- create a problem, solve the problem, profit from the solving of the problem--- and put it all in more human terms so that we can see how allowing ourselves to be "victims" and to blame "culprits" instead of being proactive and taking responsibility, leads to being victimized by the supposed "saviors" over and over and over again.

It also brings to mind the reason that there is no peace in the world and why there can never be peace in the world despite so many people wanting and needing it. As long as war is profitable, we will be beset by war. First, the parasites who profit from this bestial "business" destroyed Europe. Now, they want to destroy America. China will be next on the list, forty, fifty, a hundred years from now.

Just watch the progression and how these war-mongers operate.

They were originally headquartered in Europe. When they left Europe and migrated to the United States, they unleashed not one, but two World Wars to cover their tracks and create opportunities to plunder, plunder, plunder.

Now they have moved on to China, and they are trying their best to repeat their whole schtick here in America.

When they leave China they will no doubt move back to Europe again---- and around and around it goes.

The ONLY way to put an end to this is to recognize that we are being played like violins. Recognize it for what it is. See the pattern. See who is actually responsible for and supporting and profiting from war.....and then figure out how to make war unprofitable forever.

It could be as simple as a United Nations accord in which all the nations of the world agree that whoever starts a war has to pay for it regardless of who wins.

That would nip it all in the bud pretty neatly.

I am sure there are other solutions we can come up with to make war unprofitable. That's just a "for starters". Now that you are thinking about it and seeing the problem (perhaps for the first time) as a matter of taking the cheese from the rats----what's your answer?

How do we make war permanently unprofitable?
