

International Public Notice: We Are Sorry

By Anna Von Reitz

Our condolences go out to 1.2 billion Catholics who have been lied to and whose faith must now be severely tested. Pope Francis has just identified the Father of Jesus Christ as Lucifer.

This is, of course, a Big Lie. It's a truly enormous lie--unless, of course, the Pope means to admit that the entire narrative spun by acolytes of Simon Magus is a lie, and everything about it -- including the identity of "I - Zeus" is a lie, fathered by Lucifer, the Father of all lies. That admission, would be a backhanded truth, because the Church has not been honest about Yeshuah.

We have followed and detailed the weird progression of offices that Francis has occupied --- having been given the secular duties of the Pope without the ministerial duties, Benedict XVI taking the ministerial duties to his grave, and then the Eastern Patriarchs being cajoled into giving Francis an old vacated office in the Byzantine Church as "Patriarch of the West" so that he could still claim a Pope-like office in a different offshoot of the Universal Church.

We are witnessing the same kind of maneuver the Church pulled during the Dark Ages in Europe, where it split in two, with a Pope in the West and a Pope in the East. Once again, all the money that Francis ordered "home" to the Vatican two years ago, has been consolidated and sent East to Constantinople.

When the bill collectors come knocking, Francis will be able to truthfully say that his pockets are empty.

So we have a Pope who isn't a Pope, setting up a constructive fraud to avoid paying debts, claiming that Lucifer was Jesus's Father. LOL. Sounds like Lucifer was Jorge Bergolio's Father, too.

Remember what we told you about the polarization that is close upon us now, when evil will coagulate and separate from good, and become clearly identifiable, just as oil separates from water, and as sheep are separated from goats.

This is inevitable, and not even a showdown. It is, in the end, a revelation, a great apocalypse in which the Truth will be known.

The word "apocalypse" is not nearly as dreadful as it sounds; it implies a removal of a veil, the pulling back of a curtain so we can see what is behind it, like Toto pulling back the curtain to expose the Wizard of Oz.

Should it surprise us that the Roman Catholic Church was built on sin and error? Not really. For one thing, Peter was never Bishop of Rome.

It's pretty hard to inherit an office that the Disciple never held from him, but knowing how the system works, there was probably another "Peter" involved, so a half-truth could be preserved --- just as Saint Jerome stitched in the "Letters" of another Paul, Paul of Ephesus, into the Canon, and presented these "homages" as the words of Saint Paul.

A guy named Paul wrote them. That much is true.

Then there's the Crusades and "Killing for Jesus" in general, the Inquisition and the Income Tax to pay for the Church's war expenses --- compared to that, selling Indulgences allowing rich sinners to sin free of charge, seems like a minor infraction.

How about the ritualized cannibalism taught under the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, which teaches that the Communion wine turns into actual blood in the cup? And all the strange museums and churches devoted to showing off corpses in glass coffins, severed heads, and body parts of departed saints? The creepy crucifix with the dead body still nailed on it?

Many Catholics are confused when they discover a Satanic Cult hidden at the heart of their beloved Church, but the signs and portents are set before everyone in plain sight.

Just like each one of us, the Church was never completely good nor completely evil; it was and is an admixture, holding within it cynical devil-worshipping monsters and selfless saints.

And now, the process of separation is inevitable.

To our friends in the Roman Catholic Church, please realize that yes, you have been snookered by the Father of All Lies; promptly forgive yourselves for that, and use your own discernment to pick through the wheat and the chaff of the Church.

Save what is good. Keep faith with what is true. And cut away all the rest.
