

International Public Notice: We Did Win the War

By Anna Von Reitz

There are, as usual with the Brits, a number of disinformation campaigns being waged as their adherents attempt to tell the world that no, they are not responsible for nine-tenths of the ugliness of the past 300 years, no, they are not at the bottom of every dog pile, no, they are not dishonorable business partners, liars, and thieves.

Look all you want, as long as you like, dig as deep as you please --- and what you will find is what you will find: the Brits at the start, heart, and genesis of every international crime, every war, every pernicious conflict, every land-grab, every genocide, every crime against humanity.

We wish it were not so; this country has had close ties to Britain, which have only caused it loss and pain and shame.

It should come as no surprise that British agents are now, out of the blue, after more than two hundred years, spreading around copies of The Definitive Treaty of Peace authored in 1783, and using this document to make the False Claim that they actually won The War of Independence.

This is based on the statements in that document to the effect that King George remained the Arch-Treasurer and "Prince" of the United States of America.

Let's use our brains now that we know that there were two such entities calling themselves "United States of America" --- one British, and one American, and figure out which is being referenced in The Definitive Treaty of Paris when the King claims these titles?

The American Federation of States, the Holding Company that grew out of the American version of "United States of America" is forever unincorporated and doing business to this day under the name written like this: The United States of America.

The British version is forever written like this: "the United States of America" and it has been run by a British Crown corporation also called "the United States of America, Incorporated" since the 1850s. They haven't been careful about adding "Incorporated" to the name of this corporation, so it is often mistaken for the separate political territory it serves.

As part of the peace process ending the war, England was given some concessions. For example, British investments in America were for the most part, untouched.

British businesses located in the former Colonies were allowed to continue undisturbed going forward, and were not taxed or treated any better or worse than American businesses.

British citizens could remain in this country to "provide essential government services" and British loyalists could retain their fealty to the King, so long as they were willing to place their land in a holding trust; that is, they would not be allowed to own land in this country, but could remain here pleasantly enough and enjoy their former property in peace as "residents".

This is the reason we have the Residence Act.

The peacemakers also bowed to some temporal realities. The British and French were constantly skirmishing or at open war and as a result, American commercial shipping was constantly attacked by both sides. The end of The War of Independence required a solution to that as the Americans had yet to build a real navy.

The King agreed to be our Trustee on the High Seas and Navigable Inland Waterways, to manage the offshore United States Territories and Possessions, and to accept a 10% share in the in-ground gold resources of the country, to be collected as gold was discovered and mined throughout The United States.

It was highly anticipated that gold would be discovered on the West Coast, similar to the gold discoveries already made in South America. So the King wanted a "tributary share" in that -- and got it.

As recently as 2016, the Queen was trying to sell this interest in our gold to the Chinese.

The King retained, through his Trusteeship on the High Seas and Navigable Inland Waterways, a claim to run the Admiralty Courts and Courts of Maritime Commerce as "international courts" in this country -- which is why the Judiciary Act subsequently split the court system in this country into land courts run by Americans and sea courts run by British Bar Attorneys.

The War of Independence did not ultimately create a complete and utter separation from Britain, nor was it a complete separation from the Papacy in the form of the Holy Roman Empire, but it did secure American land and soil for Americans, it did make our law paramount on the land and soil, and it did secure our air and coastal waters.

It left us with a population of Tories still living among us as U.S. Citizens. It left a portion of our Armed Forces, notably the U.S. Navy and later, Marines, at the disposal of the King on the High Seas and Navigable Inland Waterways.

It left another separate population of Catholic Municipal Government employees living here among us as Federal Civil Servants, working for the Post Office, Patent Office, Customs, etc. They "reside" here, too, and while employed in these venues are considered a foreign citizenry, allowed here under the provisions of the Residence Act.

It is from such leftover inroads as this and from flagrant Breach of Trust on the part of the British Government(s) -- both the Monarchy and Westminster -- that the present situation has developed; still, we won what we needed to win.

We won: our independence now and forevermore from the British Parliament, our Independent ownership of our land and soil and all assets derived from the land and soil (10% of gold, exempted), our independent administration of our own Law and the concurrent superior general jurisdiction of our courts. All of these and more are ours.

The generalized power-sharing that became more evident with the adoption and publication of the three Federal Constitutions in 1787, 1789, and 1790, work out the implementation details of the peace process leaving the American Federal Subcontractor known as the Federal Republic in charge of most aspects of a national government, the British Territorial Subcontractor entrusted with the sea-going and Territorial aspects mentioned above, and the Holy Roman Empire in charge of the Post Office, Patent Office, Trademarks, International Copyrights, Weights and Measures, issuance of passports, and collection of Customs Duties.

The Northwest Ordinance, considered one of the Four Organic Laws of this country, was a final concession to the King's gold tribute interest; to make sure that he wasn't cheated out of his 10%, the British-controlled Territorial forces would administer the exploration of new states and hold them in Territorial control until such time as they were populated and organized enough to become States of the Union.

This has had an odd quirk as a result of the Mercenary Conflict known as The American Civil War. The suppression of the actual American Government under the False Pretense that it was in some way associated with the Rebel Cause, led to a situation in which the actual Congress of States fell dormant and had not been in Session for over a hundred years.

All the new States that had been formed during and after the Civil War were left languishing as "territorial states" waiting for the day when they could be formally enrolled as actual States of the Union. They acquired a form of Statehood -- Territorial Statehood - but not the real thing.

This is the reason that "the Federal Government" -- specifically the remaining foreign Federal Subcontractors, the United States of America, Inc. and the Successors to the Holy Roman Empire contract known as The Constitution of the United States, established vast "Federal" hegemonies in the Western States, including huge set-asides of land for use as National Parks and public grazing lands. This is why mining rights and water rights and leases of public resources in the Western States were all handled by the Federal Government Corporations and their State-of-State franchises, operating as, for example, the State of Nevada (Territorial) or STATE OF NEVADA (Municipal).

As of October 1st 2020 all that changed, as the senior States of our Federation unanimously and by Roll Call Vote, enrolled all of these Territorial States as States of the Union, retroactive to the day they entered Territorial Statehood, and thereby finally completed the process mandated by the Northwest Ordinance.

This has the immediate effect of endowing all these Territorial States with the powers and prerogatives of true States of the Union. They are no longer under any presumption of Federal hegemony.

In the Definitive Treaty of Paris there is only one reference to our States of the Union, in which they are called "the free, sovereign, and independent states"; the rest of the whole document is concerned with the rights and titles retained over the British Territorial "United States of America" and its administration in cooperation with the Holy Roman Empire partners.

Here we still are, inconveniently or not, free, sovereign, and independent --- regardless of what certain members of The British Pilgrims Society may wish, and the lies they are still trying to promote.

Now that you are fully informed of the existence of this "other" United States of America, you are prepared to appreciate how both Britain and the Holy Roman Empire Successors were left in a position of trust following The American Civil War Mercenary Conflict, and how they betrayed that trust in their own self-interest, coming to prey upon the people they were supposed to serve, and to misrepresent this country to the rest of the world for their own ends.

They have used our military resources to promote mercenary conflicts throughout the globe; they have enrolled and indicted and mustered generations of Americans under False Pretenses, constructed False Contracts and False Citizenships, and promoted crime on a vast scale.

At this late date, they are still wasting our credit and assets without a shred of authority to do so, and they are still huffing and puffing in Washington, DC, the erstwhile "Federal Capitol" and proposing that they have the right to press gang and conscript our people into military service, including our young women, against their will.

We call upon the world to witness their infamy, their war-mongering, and their repugnant abuse of the people they are meant to serve with "good faith" and due diligence.
