

The Wheels of God

By Anna Von Reitz

Ever since the Temple Veil was torn in half, Almighty God, the Father, our Creator, has taken up his abode with men.

You are the temple he built for himself. Your heart is his sanctuary. Your feet and hands are his.

What the Irish call "the All of it" already stands revealed.

While you have wondered how and why, he has known the answer.

Bidden or unbidden, he is, was, and will be present.

Breathe in. You have not waited or hoped in vain.

The wealth of the unrighteous are saved up for you.

The light of Heaven rains down on you.

Not by power and not by might, but by his spirit alone.

By his hand and wisdom is each one chosen.

See the wheels of God set in motion in far distant times

Ever onward to this moment, he arrives.

With mercy and the sword of truth he comes.

His goats and his sheep stand before him.

Surely his great kindness yet endures.

We are appointed to this hour, so let it come.

May the fire in our hearts destroy the world

May the Lord of our hearts make it new

And may the Earth be saved with all the good upon it.

By these miracles you have seen and yet will see

Know that the wheels of God are turning.
