

Who Saves Humanity?

By Anna Von Reitz

I was asked a provocative question this morning--- who saves humanity? People seem to think that this rests on one teacher or teaching or individual, such as Jesus or Brahma or King David or Buddha or the Mahdi---- but it does not.

Instead, humanity has to save itself, by discerning and following all teachings which honor life and health and love.

A choice is set before each one of us: what do you want?

Life or death?
Peace or war?
Lies or truth?

Under the Universal Law of Freewill, it is our right and duty to choose. This is why the True Creator, AOUA, exhorts us to choose life. Choose life for ourselves and our planet. Turn away from choosing death and destruction.

He gives us all the tools and information and trusts us to see the reasons, but it is still our choice.

Like a good parent teaches their son how to drive a car, goes over the rules of the road, practices with him until he has the skills, makes sure he knows the laws, makes sure he has a car that is mechanically sound, does everything that can be done to prepare his son to drive ----- and yet, there comes that moment, when the son drives out onto the open road, and it is his decisions that determine all the outcomes.

Will he go wildly over the speed limit? Stray out of his lane into oncoming traffic? Take a turn too fast? Not recognize the danger of black ice on the road? We are all like that student driver.

Our Creator has sent us teacher after teacher, road map after road map, and has lovingly and carefully prepared us, yet, it's still up to us. Will we save ourselves or not?
