

International Public Notice: More Mysteries Solved

By Anna Von Reitz

For those of you who have followed the My Lunch Break YouTube channel and similar channels documenting the Great Mudflood and unexplained architectural anomalies, including the Tartarian Empire and the existence of a race of giants that persisted into the 1900s, we now have drilled down to yet another ugly truth wrapped like a snake around this single word: energy.

We have already flagged the moment in history when Winston Churchill switched the British Navy from using native British anthracite coal as its primary energy source to petroleum --- and the impact that had on the world and on the Mideast and Iraq in particular:

The need of the British Empire for a base of operations in the Middle East is crystal clear.

The Brits didn't have oil resources of their own in 1914, so securing oil for their Navy was indeed a matter of National Security and the change from using native coal to foreign oil was deeply concerning. The British Navy became dependent on Middle Eastern oil, which meant that Britain --- and the British Empire --- became dependent on Middle Eastern oil.

The members of the Westminster investment group were tapped to develop properties far different from Mayfair and Belgravia -- oil bearing properties in the Mideast.

The "flight to oil" and away from coal was motivated by the fact that crude oil is the most energy dense fossil fuel source on Earth, and significantly cleaner-burning than coal. The cost of maintaining deeper and deeper coal mines in Britain and near-constant mine accidents and public outcries against pollution and endangerment of workers were also factors driving this inexorable conclusion.

Like whale oil, coal and coal oil was replaced as the primary fuel for travel and industry, coal-fired steam boilers were replaced with oil and gas burning engines --- and crude oil naturally became King --- or did it?

Oil wasn't needed in Tartaria, and that gave the Old Russian Empire a great advantage relative to the rest of the world.

They had discovered the secrets of geomagnetic free energy, but despite its abundance, its clean character, its unlimited power, its permanence and ease of application, and its ability to move easily from one location -- even very remote locations -- to another, oil had one (and only one) significant advantage over geomagnetic energy: oil was a physical commodity that could be metered and monetized.

Oil could be measured in barrels, and both crude and refined oil products could be "unitized" and packaged as a product, limited as a commodity, manipulated by central banks and commodity exchanges, parceled out and priced and --- in effect, taxed.

Free energy by comparison presented very limited "market opportunities" --- once the initial outlay in equipment costs had been made, free energy engines were inexhaustible and virtually permanent. Even if you could and did meter the electricity being generated, there would be no unitized commodity to control, package and sell.

Chiselers like J.D. Rockefeller and his British counterparts in the Westminster group, decided to corner the market ---even before a market existed --- for the "next" big consumer commodity: oil.

Here's what they did to get rid of the competition:

The entire field of psychiatry sprouted like a mushroom overnight, at precisely the same time that it became necessary to erase the Tartarians and find a way to excuse their sudden disappearance.

Thanks to Tom Bearden and others who independently observed the theoretical and mathematical necessity of free energy, what he called "zero point energy", it's obvious that the end of Big Oil is on the horizon, and also obvious that people who are able to think and reason for themselves will always be able to deduce the truth.

In the minds of the profiteers, this means that people must be intellectually crippled and prevented --- somehow --- from exercising independent thought.

DARPA came up with self-assembling nanoscale antennas injected into "volunteers" as a means of thought control and mass messaging. An earlier attempt at this caused "Sleeping Sickness" epidemics, aimed at rendering people unable to think at all.

AI has been introduced to track everyone's mental state and interests, tagged onto every research topic and "preloaded" with a prejudiced and limited programming algorithm designed to do our thinking for us, limit what we know, and most of all, designed to destroy our ability to remember things on our own.

How many phone numbers do you currently have memorized?

People are being seduced on many levels by convenience and in the process, are surrendering their intellectual power and ability to think for themselves and remember data for themselves.

Always the story is the same: destroy what you cannot control, hoard knowledge for yourselves alone, control public opinions with repetitive narratives, use entertainment as a means to enslave, blame the victims for what you do to them, steal their identities and commit your crimes in their names. Mirror everything, so that the fiction becomes indistinguishable from the fact and confusion reigns.

It's not hard to see. It's not hard to understand.

If you let the siren song of the False Nanny State beguile you, the British Empire and their Roman collaborators will reduce you to living as a helpless piece of vegetative bio-battery, hooked up to a control grid, and studied like an amoeba.

They will tell you that you are "happy" and that you "volunteered" for this, long after you have been enslaved and crippled and left unable to defend yourselves.

We are not biological computers. We are literally children of the Living God. As long as we remember who we are and remember our true origins, they are powerless against us.

The acolytes, beneficiaries, and Cheating Monsters who profited most from Big Oil have been in a tail spin for decades, seeking means to prevent our rediscovery of free geomagnetic energy -- which they continue to erase and discredit, but can't hide forever.

The Monsters have also been seeking some other form of energy that can be unitized and marketed and sold as a metered product.

At last, they found it, sleeping in Arctic Permafrost: Helium-3, the elusive precursor fuel for nuclear fusion technology, a means to create a resource that can be mined and profited from, something that can be controlled and exploited via market manipulation, a new source of energy --- but one that the Cheating Monsters can own and monopolize.

Look here, scraping its way along the back wall of the classroom:

"Canada Breaks Oil: Fusion Discovery Makes Oil Worthless in 18 Months Hidden"

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=C6GzFpz-RnQ>

Any questions now about why the USA, Inc. -- the Westminster Investment Group -- is so hot to acquire Greenland? Or why they suddenly want all of western and far northern Canada to be under the USA, Inc. umbrella? Any question why Donald Trump and Friends are pre-positioned to develop fusion tech?

Helium 3 is the next "big" consumer product in the energy sector.

They will use Venezuelan oil to limp through the transition and then Big Oil will be cast off like a dirty shirt-- like coal, oil will be a fuel used by poor people and poor countries. That's why Saudi Arabia is pivoting away from the European and US markets and competing with Russian oil markets in China, Africa, and India, instead.

Using free energy and setting all of mankind free from having to slave away and pay for fuel, whether oil or He 3, remains anathema.

The Cheating Monsters prevent us from accepting the free, clean gift of Mother Earth, because they can't figure out a way to control and monopolize and package free energy as a commercial product.

They can't imagine the new horizons that beckon once we no longer have to drill and capture and process and market fuel products.

They can't imagine a world where they don't have to control, and chisel, and cheat, and play coercive grown-up versions of Monopoly.

Their limitations are not meant to limit the rest of us.
