

Paper Monsters

By Anna Von Reitz

The people who have done these evil things to Americans for the past 150 years, and to people worldwide for centuries, are criminals. It has nothing to do with politics. It has to do with crime.

It's just plain old garden variety crime: identity theft, credit theft, unlawful conversion, illegal securitization, kidnapping, human trafficking, press-ganging, conspiracy against the constitutions, personage, barratry, blackmail, fraud, false flag attacks, counterfeiting, impersonation, pedophilia, drug trafficking, prostitution, extortion, racketeering, mail fraud, enslavement, arson, murder, false witness, peonage, and treason -- among many, many other crimes that have been committed against the innocent people and countries of the world by corporations in the business of providing governmental services, banks, insurance companies, title companies (that shouldn't exist), armed services, regulatory agencies, and so on.

Those hired and subscribed under Oath to serve the people have instead oppressed, cheated, enslaved and betrayed them. They have taken the saying, "The master is the servant." and turned it on its head: "The servant is the master."

And they have tried to excuse their actions by saying, "We are a corporation and can't be held accountable for our actions."

Oh, yes, they can.

Every corporation involved in this gross disservice and criminality is subject to liquidation --- loss of their charters, loss of their assets, loss of their public personas. And they are not owed any protection from the so-called "corporate veil", no bankruptcy protection for their shareholders, no privileges at all.

Every single corporation that has refused to repent and come to heel deserves complete dissolution, with their assets to be sold at public auction to pay restitution for their crimes.

Depending on the severity and deliberateness of their acts, the assets of their shareholders may also be attached and sold to recoup the damages.

Who has the authority to order their liquidation? First and foremost, the responsibility to liquidate these offending corporations is with with the Roman Curia and the Pope, who created the entire concept of corporations in the first place.

Secondarily, the responsibility to liquidate these corporations is the Queen's, because we delegated and entrusted her, specifically, with the responsibility to create and police the activities of commercial corporations "for" us.

Finally, the responsibility to liquidate these corporations is our responsibility, because it is our delegated authority that is being abused to create, sustain, and allow the unaccountable rampages of these Paper Monsters.

These corporations think they are safe.

They think the Pope and the Curia will protect them. They think the British Monarch can protect them.

They don't realize that their charters are all issued under our authority, and that the ultimate specific authority allowing their existence and continuance lies with us: The United States of America, the States, and the People.

As our Delegated Powers have returned to us by Operation of Law and we have acknowledged and accepted their return, there can be no question or interference from either the Pope and Queen if we are obliged by their incapacity to begin liquidation of corporations from here to Bangkok.

We are fed up, ready to pull the plug on them, their patents, trademarks, copyrights, and charters.

No criminal organization is owed any public privilege and that includes governmental services corporations and banks.
