

International Public Notice: Take Notice of What We Are Telling You

By Anna Von Reitz

When Karen Hudes first told us what was going on at the World Bank and how the Americans were being misrepresented by the corporate officers of the UNITED STATES and USA corporations, she said, "This will blast the world back to the nineteenth century."

And here we are, more than a decade later, hearing it again:

Why are people assuming this? Because the fraud stretches back to the years immediately prior to the so-called American Civil War.

The entire world has been run as a confidence racket ever since, and in terms of law, especially Roman Civil Law, that means that everything that derived from this unimaginably huge fraud must be erased.

Most people conceive of this as a total destruction of the entire governmental and monetary system and a literal return to ground zero, which means back to horses and buggies and gold and silver coins in our pockets.

What if it means something else? Something truly beneficial?

Yes, the current system, a criminal system, has to go. Remedy must be provided, restitution made, purloined property returned, the legal system uprooted, yes, all of that and more.

But we can't return to the nineteenth century even if we wanted to, so what is really set before us in terms of going forward is a clean slate and a new opportunity to build a world that is free of the evil assumptions and practices of what has gone before.

We are born free as living, sentient beings. As the old institutions dissolve the future is in our hands.
