Thanks, WarNuse.

Unfortunately, it's too late to lynch most of these reprobates, as most of them are already dead and gone.

So is FDR.

And paying to keep the surviving excuses-for-people alive in state of the art cells at Gitmo is just offensive to reason.

Do you know how much it will cost to keep John Brennan alive for the next twenty years?

We could raise twenty young Americans in very good circumstances and send them all the way through college for the same amount.

The extremely "relative pleasure" of reducing his life to hope of a book contract is not sufficient to excuse such a waste of funding.

No, I like GHWB's idea better.

We plunk them down at one end of Wall Street and tell them to run for it....
